

Ashimui, Okinawa's oldest sacred place, is said to be created by the god. Its four grandiose rocky peaks were formed by elevation of the limestone layer happened 200 million years ago and erosion over the long time since then. The royal family of Ryukyu Dynasty prayed here for their prosperity, harvest and maritime safety. Daiseikirinzan, located in Ashimui, is the place for you to pray and talk with Mother Nature.

Yambaru, a subtropical forest

The northern area of Okinawa Island called "Yambaru", literally meaning "mountains and fields", is where a vast nature of subtropical forest still flourishes.

You can find aerial roots dangling from Chinese Banyan trees and gigantic Cycads soaring in the sky.

Enjoy yourself immersed in the pristine forest with subtropical trees and plants.
